About Healthwatch Sunderland

Healthwatch Sunderland is your local health and social care champion.

We make sure NHS leaders and social care decision makers hear your voice and use your feedback to improve care. We can also help you to find reliable and trustworthy information and advice.

It is our vision to live in a world where we can all get the health and care we need.

It is our mission to make sure people's experiences help make health and care better.

Our values are to:

- Listen to people and making sure their voices are heard.
- Include everyone in the conversation – especially those who don't always have their voice heard.
- Analyse different people's experiences to learn how to improve care.
- Act on feedback and driving change.
- Partner with care providers, Government, and the voluntary sector – serving as the public's independent advocate.

Why we did this work

During our engagement with the Essence Service, which supports people in the early stages of dementia and their carers, we heard from local carers about some of their experiences. They expressed concerns about the lack of information available on local support services following their family members' diagnoses. Many felt unsure about where to go for help and were not aware of the available resources. This feedback was also recognised by the Essence Service during their feedback sessions held in Dementia Action Week 2023.

In response to this need, we collaborated with the Essence Service, carers and other local partners to create this booklet. It offers key support information for people with memory difficulties and those living with dementia.

Please be aware that some of the services mentioned, are only available to people with a dementia diagnosis.

Introduction

Struggling with memory difficulties or receiving a diagnosis of dementia can be worrying. It can have a big effect on the person and those close to them. It can take time to adjust.

Sometimes people can feel overwhelmed if they start experiencing difficulties with their memory or at the time of getting the dementia diagnosis. This is why local carers felt there was a need for this booklet. It has information on key support services in Sunderland. We hope you find it useful.

Memory difficulties

Most people forget things from time to time. If you keep having problems with memory, it is best to see a GP. It could be something that can be treated.

What is dementia?

Dementia is an umbrella term for a range of conditions that affect the brain and get worse over time.

Each type of dementia stops a person's brain cells from working properly in certain areas. This affects a person's ability to remember, think and speak as well as affecting some physical functions.

Doctors use the word "dementia" to describe common symptoms that will get worse over time. This can be memory difficulties, confusion, and problems with speech and understanding.

Dementia can affect a person at any age. It is more common in people over the age of 65.

Your age and genes affect your risk of getting dementia. You cannot change this. Things you can change include keeping your mind and body active, enjoying healthier food, not smoking, drinking less alcohol, staying in touch with people, and dealing with any health problems.

This booklet will explain where you can get support locally. This support can help you to live your life well.

Living with dementia

Age UK has written a useful guide 'Living with Dementia', which gives information around concerns following a diagnosis to support future care.

"If you experience memory difficulties or have a dementia diagnosis there are lots of services that can help you, now and in the future!"

The Memory Protection Service

If a person is experiencing memory difficulties, they can refer themselves or their GP may refer them to the Memory Protection Service for an assessment.

Once the service receives your referral, they will send patients a letter. This will inform them how long they are likely to wait for their first appointment. Patients will also receive a pack containing useful information and tips on how to protect their memory while they are waiting.

Before a diagnosis

The first appointment with the Memory Protection Service will be for an initial assessment. The current waiting times for this is 12 weeks (as of February 2025).

Patients will be given information, which includes contacts for local services, who can offer practical support.

Following the initial assessment, findings will determine what plan of care will be required.

Patients may be requested to attend for testing, which may include a head scan. They may receive appointments with other professionals. If the person is not found to have a dementia diagnosis, they will be discharged from the Memory Protection Service and signposted to the most appropriate service.

What is mild cognitive impairment?

Mild cognitive impairment can cause noticeable but mild memory and thinking difficulties. A mild cognitive impairment is not a dementia diagnosis. People with mild cognitive impairment can function and perform tasks without any difficulties.

A mild cognitive impairment can affect some memory, problem solving, attention, thinking and some visual ability. These can vary depending on what cognitive area of the brain is affected.

What happens if mild cognitive impairment is diagnosed?

If mild cognitive impairment is diagnosed the patient will be discharged from the Memory Protection Service. However, they can be re-referred if there is a deterioration or further concerns noted.

Please turn to the next page for more information and contact details for the Memory Protection Service.

What happens if a diagnosis of dementia is received?

If you receive a dementia diagnosis from the Memory Protection Service, you will be given an information pack which includes;

- Information about the dementia diagnosed.
- Booklets about dementia and caring for people with dementia .
- Contact details for local support organisations.
- Details of their education groups, which share information on dementia and local support.

Patients with a mild to moderate diagnosis will be invited to attend Cognitive Stimulation Therapy groups. These are ran by the mental health trust, Cumbria Northumberland Tyne and Wear Foundation Trust. These help patients to keep their mind active and engaged. It uses a range of activities which enhance cognitive and social functioning.

The National Institute of Health and Care Research

This network delivers research across 30 medical specialties, including dementia and is part of the NHS.

Their research aims to enhance the treatments, diagnosis, care or management in the future. They hold a list of names of volunteers interested in research. If there is a suitable study, those on the list may be contacted to see if they are interested in being involved.

They also have a separate Carers Register to facilitate recruitment into carer research. This research may involve gaining the views of those who currently or have previously supported people with the above conditions.

Local support services

Essence Pre-Diagnostic Service

The Essence Service has a dedicated worker to support those with symptoms of dementia who do not yet have a formal diagnosis.

Anyone with concerns about memory or other cognitive difficulties can contact the service for advice and can be supported to access assessment from local Memory Services if required.

Considering a diagnosis can be daunting, but according to figures from The Alzheimer's Society, 95% of people given a diagnosis agreed it was "better to know". Having a formal diagnosis may give access to treatments and support services that may not otherwise be available. It may give an individual the opportunity to plan for their future, and to make legal and financial arrangements as well as to discuss their wishes for their future care and treatment.

The Essence Pre-Diagnostic Service offers emotional and practical support during a vulnerable time. The service can support with information on symptoms and tips for coping, and support to access other services that may be useful. Individuals can be monitored until they have an outcome from their assessment, and if a diagnosis is given, they can be referred on for ongoing support from the Essence Dementia Team.

Local support services

For people with memory difficulties or a dementia diagnosis, it is important to keep doing enjoyable activities. This could be a hobby or a favourite activity.

It is also important to stay in contact with family and friends and get to know new people. This includes people who also have difficulties with their memory or have a diagnosis of dementia and their loved ones.

In this section is some information on organisations in Sunderland that can offer support. These organisations can help people to get out and about, take part in activities and improve a person's wellbeing.

Sunderland GP Alliance Social Prescribers

Social prescribers work with people to find out 'what matters to them'. The team will then support people in their own community.

The social prescribing service can help people with housing worries, money worries, being more physically active, connecting with others and support with mental health and physical wellbeing.

You can self refer to the service by visiting: www.sunderlandhealthandwellnesshub.nhs.uk (visiting the 'Social Prescriber' section).

You can also ask the receptionist at your GP practice to refer you to the Sunderland GP Alliance Social Prescribing Service.

Local support services

The Essence Service, Age UK Sunderland's dementia hub

This service works with local partners to offer free and dedicated services for people who have been diagnosed with mild to moderate dementia and their carers.

The team offer social prescribing support. This gives information in areas around health, wellbeing and legal issues. They also make sure people are aware of how to access other services which may be useful to them.

People with a mild to moderate dementia diagnosis receive emotional support and support from others with similar experiences. This helps them to understand and deal with their diagnosis in a positive way.

Evidence suggests that keeping active and stimulated when a person has mild to moderate dementia is essential. It helps to slow down its progression and maintains wellbeing. With this in mind, the Essence Service offers a variety of activities. These are available from its Doxford Park centre in Sunderland and in the wider community.

The Essence Service also recognises the vital role of carers and the effect caring for someone with dementia can have. They support carers throughout the dementia journey. As the dementia progresses staff continue to help carers. They offer person centred support, social prescribing and peer support groups.

Peer support groups are a chance for carers to join other carers and talk about their experiences. This is done in a relaxed confidential environment. Sharing experiences with other carers can help to reduce feelings of guilt, loneliness and isolation. It also enables carers to access information and support during and, after the caring role ceases.

Planning for the future

Planning for legal matters related to memory difficulties or dementia should ideally take place in the early stages. The person can then still express their wishes and understand the implications. This will help the person feel more in control. This includes:

- Making a will: If possible, this should be done with the guidance of legal experts to make sure it is valid.
- Appointing a power of attorney: Choosing a trusted person or persons to handle financial and healthcare decisions when a person can no longer do so.
- Advance care planning: Discussing your wishes for medical care and end-of-life decisions with healthcare professionals and loved ones.

Making a will: The ability to create a will largely depends on a person's mental capacity. Dementia is a condition that gets worse over time. It affects cognitive functions, such as memory and the ability to make choices. As the dementia advances, it can change a person's ability to fully understand the implications of a will.

Early stages: In the early stages of memory difficulties or dementia, people may still be able to make a will. At this stage it is very important to involve legal professionals and medical experts to assess their capacity. This will make sure the process is conducted correctly.

Mild to advanced stages: As dementia progresses, the ability to create a will may diminish. At this point, it's essential to prioritise the person's best interests. If they cannot understand the will's implications, it is best to seek alternatives.

Once you have made a will, it is usually stored with a solicitor, and you get a copy. Most solicitors charge a small fee for this. You can keep the will at home if you prefer. It is important to tell someone you trust where it is kept. This will help them to find it when it is needed.

The probate service can also keep your will for you for a fee. Visit www.gov.uk (search 'how to store a will with the probate service').

Age UK have written a guide on wills and estate planning. It has practical advice for making and updating your will.

Planning for the future

Power of attorney

Power of attorney is a legal document that allows a designated person (the attorney) to make decisions on behalf of someone else (the donor).

There are two types of power of attorney:

1. Property and financial affairs power of attorney: This allows the attorney to manage the person's financial matters, such as paying bills, selling assets, and making investments. It can help to ensure the person's financial well-being. This is important if they can no longer handle their own affairs.
2. Health and welfare power of attorney: This allows the attorney to make decisions about the person's healthcare, living arrangements, and medical treatments. It helps decisions be made that align with the person's wishes. This is important when the person can no longer express them.

You can only set up a lasting power of attorney when you have mental capacity. Once someone has lost capacity, it is too late and an application to the Court of Protection will be needed.

To apply for power of attorney, visit www.gov.uk (search 'power of attorney'. You can also download the application forms from this website.)

Citizens Advice can also help you. Call their national helpline on 0800 144 8848.

There is usually a cost to register the lasting power of attorney application. Although some people on certain benefits can get a reduction or maybe exempt.

Age UK has written a guide which explains how to appoint someone to make decisions on your behalf if you're no longer able to make or communicate your decisions. It covers, the different types of power of attorney, the process of choosing an attorney, the different ways of communicating your wishes and what happens if you haven't set up a power of attorney.

It also lists useful organisations that offer impartial information and advice about setting up a power of attorney.

They also have an advocacy service which can offer help and support with power of attorney and a range of other issues, such as the other subjects mentioned in this section of the booklet.

Planning for the future

Advance care planning

Advance care planning is the process when people discuss their preferences for medical care and end-of-life decisions with healthcare professionals and loved ones.

It involves preparing for future decisions about medical care when a person becomes seriously ill or unable to let you know their wishes. Having meaningful conversations with loved ones is the most important part of advance care planning. Many people also choose to put their preferences in writing by completing documents called advance directives.

Advance directives are legal documents that offer instructions for medical care and only go into effect if the person cannot let you know their wishes.

The two most common advance directives for health care are the advanced decision (otherwise known as a living will) and the durable power of attorney for health care.

Advanced decisions or a living will

Whilst they still have mental capacity, a person may make an advance decision or a living will to refuse certain medical treatment. An advance decision would become relevant if and when there comes a time when someone is unable to make or communicate their own decisions.

Is an advance decision (living will) legally binding?

Advance decisions are legally binding, so health professionals must follow them – as long as they meet certain requirements.

Top tip

If you have to go to the Court of Protection, this can take time and be costly. As a result, it is important to have the power of attorney in place.

Planning for the future

This is me

Developed by the Alzheimer's Society 'This is Me' is a simple leaflet. It is aimed at anyone receiving professional care who is living with dementia or going through delirium or other communication difficulties.

It records details about those who can't easily share information about themselves. Such as:

- A person's cultural and family background.
- Important events, people and places from their life.
- Their preferences and routines.

The leaflet can be used in any setting. At home, in hospital, in respite care or in a care home. It helps health and social care professionals better understand who the person really is. Care delivered can then match the person's needs.

This can help to reduce distress for people living with dementia and their carers. It can also help to overcome problems with communication. As well as stop more serious conditions such as malnutrition and dehydration.

Lions Club Charity, Message in a Bottle

Lions Club Message in a Bottle scheme is a simple idea designed to encourage people to keep their basic personal and medical details on a standard form and in a common location – the fridge.

It saves the emergency services valuable time if they need to enter a property in an emergency situation.

If you have any questions about this or would like a bottle for you or a family member, please contact Healthwatch Sunderland.

Finances

This page has been written by a local gentleman with lived experience of caring for a loved one with dementia. You will note Age UK factsheets are often mentioned throughout this booklet. The gentleman found these a valuable guide of information for him.

“They are well written, accurate, easy to read, and are kept up to date. They are available online or in a booklet.”

Attendance allowance

Anyone with a dementia diagnosis, over the state pension age can apply for attendance allowance. It is a benefit which is not means-tested and is not taxable. People who need help with daily living, including personal care, day or night because of physical or mental disability i.e. dementia can apply for the benefit. To qualify, the disability must have lasted for at least 6 months. You can spend the allowance how you choose.

It is best to make the claim as early as possible. The allowance can not be backdated. Currently, there are two weekly rates of benefit. The lower rate at £73.90 and the higher rate at £110.40. The higher rate is for those who need care day and night. Benefits are paid every 4 weeks.

If the person receiving the benefit is admitted into hospital the benefit will stop after 28 days. If the person receiving the benefit goes into a care home that is funded in total or partly by the local authority, then the benefit will stop after 28 days. The Department of Work and Pensions must be informed.

Personal Independence Payment

If you are under the state pension age, you might want to think about applying for personal independence payment.

Pension credit – extra money if you are on a low income

Pension credit is a means tested benefit for older people. This means that what you get depends on your income and your savings.

Council tax reduction

If a person has a dementia diagnosis they are exempt from paying council tax. To qualify the person must receive certain benefits, below are some examples:

- Incapacity benefit
- Attendance allowance
- Personal independence payment
- Disability Living allowance.

If other adults live with someone who has a dementia diagnosis, they may get a 25% discount off their bill, if only one person is counted for Council Tax. This will be from the date of the diagnosis.

If the person with dementia goes into residential care, it is important to let the council know, as the discount will no longer apply. However, if the spouse or partner remains as the only adult living at the property, they can still claim a 25% discount.

If you provide care for someone who lives with you or if you are a resident care worker, you may also qualify for a 25% discount.

For more information contact Sunderland City Council:

Call: 01919 520 5551

Website: www.sunderland.gov.uk (search 'severely mentally impaired').

Private pensions/annuities

If the person with dementia has a private, personal or occupation pension or a private annuity, and they are married or in a civil partnership, they can 'gift' 50% of the pension to their partner who lives at home.

Social services will not include this amount when doing their financial assessment. (For more information about this and other financial matters, see Age UK factsheet number 39.)

For more information about this:

Call: 0191 514 1131

Email: enquiries@ageuksunderland.org.uk

Website: www.ageuk.org.uk/sunderland (search 'information and advice' and scroll down to free booklets and online information).

Top tip

When applying for a council tax reduction, allow time for the claim to be processed. If after this time it still hasn't been processed, ask your GP surgery for a copy of the doctor's confirmation that was sent to the council. This will help you find out if the delay is from the council or the GP.

When you own your own home – joint ownership

Joint ownership means that two or more people own a property together. This often happens when a couple buys a home. They do not have to be married to share ownership. When one of the joint owners dies, the property automatically goes to the surviving owner. There is no need for the probate process. Even if the deceased owner had a will that stated their share should go to someone else. Therefore, the entire property becomes part of the survivor's estate.

This can affect care cost assessments and may have inheritance tax implications when the surviving owner dies.

Another type of joint ownership is called tenants in common. Here, two or more people own a property but hold different shares. For example, one person might own 60%, while the other owns 40%. If one of the owners dies, their share will go to whoever they name in their will.

A solicitor or the Land Registry can help with this change. The Land Registry also provides advice and guidance.

Call: 0300 006 0411

Website: www.gov.uk (search 'land registry').

Deprivation of assets

A person may want to transfer an asset to someone else in order to avoid it being used to pay for their care. This is called a deliberate deprivation of assets. For example, someone may transfer money into someone else's bank account, or transfer ownership of a property into someone else's name.

When deciding whether a deprivation of assets has taken place, the local authority will consider:

- The motivation for disposing of the asset.
- Whether they had a reasonable expectation of needing care and support at the time.
- Whether there was an expectation of needing to contribute to the cost of their care.

Any attempt not to include an asset in the financial assessment may be seen by the local authority as a deliberate deprivation of assets. If this happens, the local authority may assess the person as if they still owned the asset.

Banking

Banks are expected to take extra care with their vulnerable customers including people with a dementia diagnosis. They are expected to make sure people's needs are met fairly and to spot early signs of vulnerability. They should act to prevent risk to these customers emerging or growing.

The following article 'bank accounts/investments held 'jointly' has been written by a local gentleman with lived experience of caring for a loved one with dementia.

Bank accounts/investments held 'jointly'

If the person with dementia has joint bank accounts or other assets held jointly, when carrying out an assessment social services can only take into account the share belonging to them. It will be assumed that the person's share is half (50%) of these joint assets, unless the person can show otherwise.

A carer may want to split the proceeds honestly and with integrity into two separate accounts. Assuming the carer has lasting power of attorney, then the account for the person with dementia will name the carer as attorney for the partner with dementia and the carer will then have a separate account in their name.

Tips for help with managing money

Things you can do now, to help with finances:

- To make sure bills are paid on time set up standing orders or direct debits.
- Have all your income, such as pensions and benefits paid into your bank account.
- Think about getting a chip and signature card. You only need to supply your signature rather than a personal identification number (PIN).
- Set up a third-party mandate. This gives another person access to your bank account. You can state how much access to give. An example of this would be a set amount for the weekly shop.

The information 'Tips for help with managing money' was taken from the NHS website. To read more visit: www.nhs.uk (search 'dementia and managing money').

Top tip

Following a dementia diagnosis book an appointment at your bank. They can discuss any worries you have and what to do to keep you and your money safe.

After a diagnosis of dementia is made, as soon as practical, advice should be sought from the local authority to establish when:

- A financial needs assessment should be made for the person with dementia
- A carer's assessment to consider whether or not the carer can manage the task of caring or if some further intervention is required

It may be a little while before these assessments are made.

"Unfortunately, and inevitably, dementia progresses, and the following notes relate to that point in time when the person with dementia must enter residential care.

This is a horrible moment for both the person with dementia and the carer. The carer will almost certainly feel guilty, but this is a misplaced emotion. You have done your very best and have, now, to admit that you are no longer able to provide the level of care your loved one needs, so you are handing over to a professional team who are better able to give the care needed." (Local carer)

The financial assessment

The following information 'the financial assessment' has been written by a local gentleman with lived experience of caring for a loved one with dementia.

As dementia progresses the need for permanent residential care may increase. The local authority has a duty of support and must carry out a needs assessment to establish 'eligible needs'.

How much people pay towards this care is determined by a financial assessment. This will consider your income, savings, and assets, reviewed in a personal budget.

If this totals more than £23,250 (as of March 2025) you will be regarded as a 'self-funder'. This means people will have to pay the full cost of care home fees until your capital reduces to, or below that figure. Following this the local authority will assist with the cost of fees. The local authority will establish your assessed weekly income as follows:

- Benefits (eg attendance allowance).
- Pensions (eg state retirement pension).
- Employment pensions x ½ (on the assumption that the other half has been gifted to your partner).
- Tariff income – where your savings and investments are valued at more than £14,250 a notional 'income' of £1 is computed for every £250 above £14,250 (eg savings = £15,250 then national or tariff income = £4 per week i.e. £1,000 divided by 250 equals £4 of notional income).

If your capital is £14,250 or less, then it must be wholly disregarded from the financial assessment.

These factors then, establish your gross weekly income. Against this amount are set expenditures which can include the expenses of utilities such as gas, electric, and water rates.

You must be left with an amount of no less than what is called a 'guaranteed minimum income'. Currently, this amount is £30.15 per week. This is subject to annual variation and is usually referred to as a personal expenses allowance.

Where you do not qualify for pension credit, guarantee credit, or savings credit then the local authority must also disregard a further £6.95 of weekly income. Your personal expense allowance is then £37.10 per week.

The purpose of the personal expense allowance is to ensure that you have money to spend on personal items. Items that are not part of personal care including toiletries, birthday gifts, newspapers & magazines and haircuts etc. Statutorily it is not to be used to cover any part of the persons care and support by the local authority

Ongoing property expenses when the person has gone into care

It is important to note that Annex C, Section 46 of the Care Act 2014 Statutory Guidance states:

'There may be some circumstances where it would not be appropriate for the local authority to leave a person only with the personal expenses allowance after charges. For example:

d) Where a person's property has been disregarded the local authority should consider whether the PEA (personal expense allowance) is sufficient to enable the person to meet any resultant costs. For example, allowances should be made for fixed payments (like mortgages, rent and Council Tax), building insurance, utility costs (gas, electricity and water, including basic heating during the winter) and reasonable property maintenance costs.'

For further information visit: www.gov.uk (search care and support statutory guidance).

Court of Protection

This is administered by HM Courts & Tribunals Service. The Court of Protection makes decisions on financial or welfare matters for people who can't make decisions for themselves due to their mental capacity.

The Court of Protection is responsible for:

- Deciding whether someone has the mental capacity to make a particular decision for themselves.
- Appointing deputies to make ongoing decisions for people who lack mental capacity
- Permitting people to make one-off decisions on behalf of someone else who lacks mental capacity.
- Handling urgent or emergency applications where a decision must be made on behalf of someone else without delay.
- Making decisions about a lasting power of attorney or enduring power of attorney and considering any objections to their registration.
- Considering applications to make statutory wills or gifts.
- Making decisions about when someone can be deprived of their liberty under the Mental Capacity Act.

Most cases are heard by district judges and a senior judge. Sometimes they can be heard by High Court judges. Cases can sometimes be transferred to a local court for hearing.

Direct payments

If Sunderland City Council assesses a person and finds they need care and support, they will offer a personal budget. This budget amount depends on the person's eligible needs at that time. The council will conduct a financial assessment. This will decide if the person must contribute towards their care costs. If a contribution is required, this amount will be deducted from the direct payment the council makes.

The council offer direct payments to allow people to buy care and support services to meet their eligible needs.

If a person or someone they care for receives help from adult services, a direct payment can be requested. This allows them to buy the care and support services to meet their eligible care needs, rather than getting services directly from them. It puts the person in control and gives more choice about how care and support is arranged and delivered. They can choose how to use the money in the direct payment. As long as it is spent on things that meet the persons personal care needs.

For more information contact Sunderland City Council:

Call: 0191 520 5551

Website: www.sunderland.gov.uk (search 'direct payments').

NHS continuing healthcare

Most people have to pay something towards the care they receive. Some people with ongoing significant health needs can get their care paid for through NHS continuing healthcare.

NHS continuing healthcare is a package of care for people who are assessed as having a 'primary health need'. It's arranged and funded by the NHS.

If you receive care in your own home the NHS covers the cost of the care and support. You need to meet your assessed health and associated care needs. This includes personal care such as help with washing and getting dressed.

If you receive NHS continuing healthcare in a care home the NHS pays your care home fees.

Speak to your healthcare provider, doctor or social worker if you think you might be eligible for NHS continuing healthcare.

Social care

Assistive technology

Assistive technology is being used in Sunderland to manage different parts of people's care, safety, health and wellbeing. This can include things like Google, Alexa and Siri. As well as smart lightbulbs and heating, home sensors and trackers.

They have many extra benefits, in addition to what they were designed for. These can support people to live well and independently. They can also support people who have a caring role for someone.

Contact Sunderland City Council to find out how this equipment can help you: Sunderland City Council

Website: www.sunderland.gov.uk (search 'assistive technology').

Telecare

Telecare service is a 24 hour a day, every day of the year service. It helps people to stay independent and living safely at home. A button is placed on the wrist or around the neck of the person. If they have a fall or need the emergency help, the person activates the button and support will arrive to their home. It gives peace of mind to the person and their family.

Telecare offer many kinds of equipment, which is linked to Sunderland City Council's highly trained staff. They help people when they are in difficulty and send a worker to their home if needed.

Social care

Specialist equipment

Sunderland Care and Support, community equipment service supplies and fits equipment and minor adaptations to a person's home. This can help people to live safely and independently at home.

Equipment is free and provided on a long-term loan basis. This is following an assessment from a nurse, occupational therapist, or physiotherapist.

If you want advice about buying your own equipment, the service can put you in touch with an occupational therapist who can help.

You can find out what equipment would make your life easier by using a website: 'AskSARA'.

If you already have been provided with equipment from the community equipment service and this equipment has broken, or you need to return your equipment call: 0191 520 5552.

The community therapy service

The community therapy service helps people live a more enjoyable and independent life.

There are a number of teams who work with people who have disabilities, including dementia. They help them to find ways of living independently by learning new skills, adapting their home environment, or finding specialist equipment to keep people safe, well and fulfilled.

The team can support people living in their own homes or in care homes. They can provide rehabilitation including occupational therapy, physiotherapy and falls management. They can support to people who need rehousing as a result of their disability or long-term health condition.

An assessment from the community therapy service may facilitate access to specialist equipment, assistive technology and adaptations to your home.

Physical health

Looking after your physical health can be difficult, but it can have a significant impact on your general wellbeing.

Many people, including those living with dementia are also living with long-term health problems, such as circulatory or respiratory issues and sight or hearing loss. It is equally important that these conditions are well managed too.

In many cases, approaches to a healthy lifestyle can benefit both brain and physical health. The following are some top priorities:

- Recognise and manage hearing loss.
- Recognise and treat depression.
- Stay active.
- Stop smoking.
- Maintain blood pressure within a healthy range (your GP practice can check this for you).
- Detect and treat high blood pressure and cholesterol (your GP practice can check this for you).
- Maintain a healthy weight and BMI.
- Reduce alcohol consumption.
- Maintain social relationships and avoid becoming isolated.
- Have regular sight checks and treatment as necessary.

What to expect from your GP practice

If a person receives a dementia diagnosis, an annual review should be carried out at their GP practice. Not all GP practices will contact the person to make an appointment for this. Make sure you contact them to make an appointment.

Although there may be very little medical intervention needed, every GP practice in Sunderland have social prescribers working with them. They can help with a range of things. (Please see section on Local Support Services for information on Sunderland GP Alliance Social Prescribers).

Always keep your GP surgery's telephone number by your telephone, just in case!

Eye health checks

Although dementia does not directly affect the eyes themselves, it can impact how the brain processes visual information.

Getting eyes checked regularly and correcting any additional vision problems can help maintain a high quality of life. This is especially important for those with dementia.

Eyes checks should take place every two years or as often as the optician recommends. If you notice any changes in your vision, you should get them checked as soon as possible. Some opticians offer home visits.

The importance of hearing tests

Evidence suggests that managing hearing loss could reduce or delay the impact of dementia. It is important we check our hearing regularly.

Once hearing loss is diagnosed, it can be managed with hearing aids. Hearing aids can significantly increase people's ability to take part in everyday life and communicate with friends and family. This helps improve people's wellbeing. This potentially reduces the risk of depression and social isolation and slows cognitive decline.

How to get an NHS hearing test

You can get a free NHS hearing test. A GP may refer you to a hearing specialist (audiologist) who can do the test. It could take a few weeks to see a specialist so it might be quicker to get tested somewhere else. This could be at a large pharmacy or opticians. This is often free.

Incontinence

Many people who are living with dementia experience incontinence of the bladder and/or bowel which can be daunting.

In Sunderland we have an NHS Bladder and Bowel Service. A nurse led team offer support with all aspects of continence promotion, assessment and treatment. They can also support with the management of continence related issues of both the bladder and the bowel. After assessment they can offer various incontinence products to best suit the person's needs.

Contact your GP practice for a referral into the service.

Dental care

A person with dementia may not be able to maintain a daily tooth and mouth cleaning routine without careful supervision. Toothache may be suffered but the person may not be able to tell anyone that they are in pain. The carer must be alert for signs. This could include; holding their face, grimacing and appearing sensitive to hot or cold food and drink.

Dentures can, eventually become uncomfortable and the person should not be pressured into wearing them. In these circumstances, food choices may then be limited. Softer foods can be considered, which need less chewing.

It is important to have regular check-ups with an NHS or private dentist.

Physical health

Taking your medications

It is important that medications are taken as prescribed. People may need support to do this.

Some medications need to be taken at set intervals or a specific time of day. With or after food, or on an empty stomach.

Things people can do to help them remember are:

- Visual reminders like a wall chart or a label stuck to the cabinet where it is kept.
- A pill organiser with separate compartments for times of day and days of the week.
- Alarms or alerts on the person's phone .
- Voice reminders, e.g. using a smart speaker.
- Smartphone apps.
- Linking taking the medication with part of their daily routine, e.g. teeth brushing. This will help to make it easier to remember.

In some cases, pharmacies can supply tablets in a dosette box. This is a pre-filled pill organiser that clearly shows the times and days when each medication needs to be taken.

Ask your regular pharmacy for details.

Podiatry (foot care)

Podiatrists specialise in helping people improve their mobility, independence and quality of life. They do this by assessing, diagnosing and treating foot and lower leg problems.

Sunderland's local podiatry department provides a range of footcare services in a number of local health centres and primary care centres in Sunderland and a Sunderland Royal Hospital.

Home visits are offered to patients who are totally housebound.

Contact your GP practice for a referral into the service.

The Falls service

This service is based at The Galleries Health Centre, Washington, and sees patients who have recently had a fall, are at risk of falling, or struggle with their mobility. They carry out an assessment for falls or the risk of falls, including for those with dizziness or balance problems.

Your GP can refer you to this service.

If you live or work in Sunderland, our stop smoking service can offer you an individual quit programme for up to 12 weeks.

You will be offered weekly tailored advice and support from a Specialist Practitioner to help plan and manage your quit attempt.

District nursing service

The district nursing service is a team of nurses consisting of district nursing specialist practitioners, community staff nurses, and health care assistants. They provide nursing care for housebound patients. The district nurses are supported by the specialist frailty nurses, social workers and the diagnostic team. The district nurses have a close working relationship with GPs, specialist palliative care services, tissue viability, continence service, equipment services, social services and other multidisciplinary and voluntary services.

The district nursing team provides nursing care to the housebound in:

- Palliative care – delivering highly skilled care at end of life and palliative support, allowing people to remain at home and die in their preferred place of care.
- Controlled drug administration and symptom management.
- Assessment and management of wounds.
- Bladder and bowel care, catheterisation and continence assessment.
- Diabetic management and support around insulin administration.
- Holistic assessment, care planning, monitoring and review of all patients entering and currently on the caseload.

Referrals into the service can be made by GPs, hospitals, patients, family members, carers, care homes and social workers. A person will be assessed to make sure the service is suitable for them.

Contact the Care Coordination Hub on: 0191 565 6100

The Frailty service

What is frailty? The term frailty refers to a person's mental and physical resilience, or their ability to bounce back and recover from events like illness and injury.

The frailty service is nursing teams working together to co-ordinate care and services for people who have been identified as needing support.

They aim to provide personalised care, support, and future care planning to promote independence, wellness, and self-care if possible. This may also help to reduce hospital admissions and to help the person stay healthier for longer.

Patients may live in their own home, sheltered accommodation, supported living or in an older persons care home.

Referrals into the service can be made by GP's, hospital services and community teams.

If you wish to contact this service, call the Care Coordination Hub on: 0191 565 6100

Physical health

Recovery at home

Recovery at home provide a 24 hours a day 7 days a week service. They are ready to respond quickly to provide support during times of illness. Or if someone experiences an unexpected change in their condition that could develop into a crisis. The teams respond to patients in their own homes.

Contact them 24 hours per day, 7 days per week by calling the Care Coordination Hub on: 0191 565 6100

Speech and Language Therapy (SALT)

Speech and Language Therapy is important for people living with dementia. It helps address difficulties with speech, language, communication, eating, drinking, and swallowing. They work on memory, problem solving, and higher-level thinking skills to maintain independence.

Contact your GP practice for a referral into the service.

The carers passport

This is in place across South Tyneside and Sunderland NHS Foundation Trust hospitals to help carers support their loved ones while they are an inpatient on the wards.

It is a credit card-sized passport, worn on a lanyard. This helps staff to identify carers and enables those carers to:

- Visit outside normal hours, including overnight, with the agreement of the ward manager.
- Help the patient with eating and drinking.
- Be actively involved in the patient's care and planning for discharge.

If you are supporting a loved one who is an inpatient in hospital. This can be in Sunderland or South Tyneside, ask a member of staff on the ward if you can be considered for a carers passport.

The Alexandra Centre

This centre is based in Sunderland Royal Hospital and is dedicated to offering care for patients with dementia and delirium while they are an inpatient in the hospital.

Patients can access therapeutic and wellbeing activities in a warm and caring, non-clinical environment.

Physical health

Delirium

Delirium is a disturbance of brain function where the person suffers from sudden confusion and changes in their behaviour and alertness. It is most common in people over 65 and in those with pre-existing memory difficulties such as dementia.

What are the symptoms of delirium?

The symptoms of delirium are often worse at night. This can affect how the person sleeps. People with delirium often sleep through the day and are awake at night. Symptoms can be made worse by constipation, pain, impaired hearing or eyesight, poor nutrition and an unfamiliar environment.

A person suffering from delirium can suffer from symptoms including;

- Confusion
- Easily distracted
- Ramble some speech
- Changes in alertness
- Agitation (sometimes leading to aggression)
- Behavioural changes
- Changes in personality including paranoia
- Hallucinations.

It is important to seek medical advice if any of these symptoms are present.

Recovery can be anytime between a few hours and several weeks. Delirium can cause people to feel frightened, suspicious, restless and uncooperative, even with people they know well.

What are the causes of delirium?

There are many causes of delirium, including:

- Infection – such as chest or urine infection.
- Certain medications, such as some sedatives.
- Surgery.
- Dehydration or abnormalities in the salts in the blood.
- Alcohol or drug withdrawal.
- Constipation.
- Stroke.
- Pain.
- Malnutrition.
- Change in the person's surroundings.

Often, delirium has more than one cause. In addition, certain patients are more prone to a delirium and require a less severe cause such as constipation to become confused.

Coping as a carer

Having a relative or friend who is suffering from delirium can be a frightening experience. The person may seem distressed and frightened and sometimes they do not recognise their closest friends or relatives.

The symptoms are normally short lived but can last several weeks or sometimes months. The duration of the delirium will change depending on the severity of the underlying cause.

Visiting the emergency department (A&E) at Sunderland Royal Hospital

Thanks to the work of carers of people with dementia, from Age UK Sunderland's Dementia Hub, Essence Service and South Tyneside and Sunderland NHS Foundation Trust, Sunderland Royal Hospital now has a dedicated, single occupancy waiting room for people who are living with dementia and their carers.

The room has been named 'Poppy's Place'. The room has activities and a dedicated accessible toilet nearby. Incontinence products are also available from the departments nurse's station if they are required.

If you attend the emergency department, ask at reception if you can use this quiet space.

Age UK Sunderland's Hospital Discharge Service

This service aims to promote a good quality of life through supporting reablement, giving choice and control of independence for all older people in Sunderland.

This free service can provide up to 3 weeks support following discharge from hospital at a time convenient to you. People need different levels of support and Age UK Sunderland's team can make visits 5 days a week, between the hours of 9.00am to 5.00pm.

How does a person qualify for the hospital discharge service?

- If the person is over 60 years old.
- Live in Sunderland.
- Are without a care plan.

What can they assist with?

- Shopping
- Light housework
- Meal preparation
- Collect prescriptions
- Companionship
- Signposting.

Physical health

Sundowning

The Alzheimer's Society say, sometimes a person with dementia will behave in ways that are difficult to understand in the late afternoon or early evening. This is known as 'sundowning'.

Sometimes you might see changes in the person's behaviour in the late afternoon or towards the end of the day. During this time, the person may become intensely distressed, agitated and have hallucinations or delusions. This may continue into the night. This makes it hard for them to get enough sleep.

Sundowning can happen at any stage of dementia but is more common during the middle and later stages.

The reasons why sundowning happens are not well understood. It is possible that a range of different causes makes it more likely. These might include:

- Tiredness, hunger, pain or other unmet physical needs.
- Not enough exposure to sunlight during the day.
- Overstimulation during the day. Such as from a noisy or busy environment.
- Disturbance to the person's 'body clock' caused by damage to the brain.
- Disturbed levels of hormones that vary over the course of the day.
- Sensory impairment, such as hearing or sight loss.
- Tiredness in other people causing the person with dementia to become upset.
- Mood disorders, such as anxiety or depression.
- Fewer carers around to look after the person (in a care home).
- Side effects of prescribed drugs.

Some of these are related to the time of day. Others may happen at any time. Try to identify which of these problems might be affecting the person, as each problem may need a different treatment.

Tips for reducing sundowning

Sometimes what seems like 'sundowning' could be the person trying to communicate a need. This could be needing the toilet, feeling hungry or being in pain.

Uneven indoor lighting and reflective surfaces can sometimes cause confusion by creating disturbing shadows or mirrors. Close the curtains or blinds once it starts to get dark and cover the television with a dust cover, if it's not being used.

Think whether something that's happened during the day has affected them. If they seem agitated, try to calm them by distracting them. Perhaps talking about a favourite memory or event they enjoy thinking about.

If they remain agitated, it could be that they have a need that is not being met. Contact the Alzheimer's Society to find out more:

Mental health crisis support

In a time of crisis, it is so important to get the right help at the right time. Who you contact will depend on how severe the situation is.

There is no step-by-step guide to accessing crisis support. Each person and situation is unique. The severity of the impact upon the person will determine which organisation or service you contact:

- Where there is danger to life – Visit your local hospital's emergency department or call 999.
- If you urgently need specialist advice the Initial Response Service offer 24/7 support and information on freephone: 0800 652 2867.
- NHS 111 (extension 2) can discuss concerns and signpost to appropriate support.
- Has the GP been made aware of the situation? Contact the surgery and speak to someone.

Housing and your home

Top tips for making your home dementia friendly:

- 1. Make sure you've got good lighting – Check that natural light can get into your house. Good lighting helps you see clearly and make sense of where you are. Make sure there's nothing blocking light from coming in through the window. Also make sure your bedroom is dark enough at night, as this will help you sleep better.
- 2. Make sure your flooring is safe – Remove anything that could make you trip up. Get rid of any rugs or mats and watch out for other trip hazards like cables. Make sure you can see the flooring clearly too, plain matt flooring is best. Avoid flooring that's shiny or that's a similar colour to the walls, as it may confuse you.
- 3. Make eating and drinking easier – Eating and drinking well is important for your health. Use plates, cups and tablecloths with colours that contrast with food. Try using clear plastic containers to store your food, so you can see what's inside.
- 4. Get furniture that you can see clearly – Dementia may affect how well you can tell the difference between colours. Use bright and contrasting colours to help you see furniture better. Avoid stripes and strong patterns as they can be confusing.
- 5. Remind yourself where things are – If you have memory problems you may forget where things are kept. Put pictures or signs on cupboards and drawers so you know what's inside them. Try to keep things like your keys, wallet and mobile phone in the same place.
- 6. Keep things simple in the bathroom – Put a picture and sign on the door labelling the toilet or bathroom. Consider removing the toilet lid if it makes it easier to identify. It's also helpful to have towels and toilet rolls with colours that contrast the walls.
- 7. Keep clutter-free – Untidiness around the home may make you feel confused and distracted. Get rid of any excess clutter and make sure cupboards and drawers are tidy. Turn off the TV or radio when you're not watching or listening to them, so the noise isn't confusing or distracting.
- 8. Cover or remove mirrors – People with dementia may not recognise themselves at their current age. This can cause distress, so you may wish to remove or cover any unnecessary mirrors.
- 9. Use equipment to keep yourself safe – Use grab rails to hold onto and prevent yourself from falling. Installing smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors can also help keep you safe. Sensors can help too. For example, they can detect whether the water has been left running or the temperature is too high or low.
- 10. Keep active and engaged – Keeping up with the things you enjoy is great for your quality of life. Use a large-faced clock and a calendar to help you keep track of the day and time, and the different things you're doing. Some people find a whiteboard helpful for writing down reminders.
- 11. Get outside – Take opportunities to get outdoors. It's good for your wellbeing. Check that the front door is easy to tell apart from the others in the road or block. If you've got a garden, make sure there's somewhere you can sit and rest when you need to.

Interactive doorbells

An interactive doorbell works by allowing people to see who is at the door when there is motion detected. Even when not home the person can see what's happening through the device's App on their phone and speak through the doorbell.

The mobile phone application (app) also has several other useful features to make a home more secure.

These are available through many trusted retailers. On the high street and online. You could ask a friend or a relative to help you find the most appropriate option.

Tyne and Wear Fire and Rescue – home safety checks

If you live in Tyne and Wear, you may be eligible for a free safe and well check. A uniformed member of staff will visit your home to discuss a range of fire prevention topics.

They will then:

- Give you detailed safety advice specific to you and your home.
- Fit smoke alarms and issue protective equipment if necessary.
- Offer you the opportunity to ask any questions.

Safe and well checks normally take around 30 to 45 minutes, but this can vary depending on your circumstances.

To find out if you're eligible for a safe and well check by visiting their website and searching 'safe and well check' or giving them a call.

Locking cooker valve

A locking cooker valve can help people to retain their independence at home and provides reassurance to family, friends and carers.

The simple safety device is fitted to existing gas cooker pipework. When the valve is locked, the gas supply to the cooker is stopped. This prevents the risk of the cooker being unintentionally turned on or left on. This can give peace of mind to the carer or relative that the cooker can't be used when they leave the house or the room.

The carer or relative can easily turn the valve on using the key when the cooker is required. This enables the vulnerable person to continue to use their gas cooker safely.

This service is free regardless of your gas supplier. You don't need to change energy supplier or inform your supplier of the device. If the property is rented you will need to seek the permission of the landlord to have the work done.

Residential and nursing care homes

Residential and nursing care homes are for people who cannot continue living in their own homes. It can be for a short time, over a longer period or permanently.

The main difference between residential and nursing care is that a nursing care home will always have a registered nurse onsite. They can manage more complex health needs compared to a residential care home.

If a person living in a residential home develops a health condition or an existing condition worsens, they may have to move to a nursing home.

People can arrange care for themselves or a loved one directly with a provider. Or the council can arrange the support and will carry out an assessment to decide the care and support needed. This will see if you meet the eligible criteria for this support.

The council can supply you with a list of Sunderland's homes and assess you.

Dial a driver scheme

Age UK Sunderland provide a scheme which is available for older people 60 years old and over who find it difficult to use public transport to get to appointments.

The scheme uses volunteer drivers who use their own cars for transport. You will be required to reimburse the fuel costs/vehicle "wear & tear" for the volunteer up to the sum of 50p per mile from the point the volunteer driver leaves their own home to their return. They will always try to get a driver who lives as close as possible to you (or your destination) to minimise costs.

The volunteer driver (all will have an up-to-date Disclosure and Barring check) will support you from the car to your appointment. They will usually be able to wait for short hospital/doctor appointments etc. When an appointment lasts longer than 45 minutes it may be necessary to book a separate return trip.

Bookings are made through Age UK Sunderland by giving them a call or sending an email. When the call can't be answered there is a voicemail facility to leave details and the call will be returned as soon as possible.

Getting out and about

'Wandering' (can be known as 'walking with a purpose')

Walking is good exercise and can help relieve stress and boredom. However, a person with dementia may walk repeatedly around at home or leave the house during the day or night.

When a person with dementia walks about, it is often referred to as 'dementia wandering'.

Walking may become a problem, especially if the person has difficulties with memory or can't find their way home. A change in walking habits can also be a sign that a person has a need that is not being met.

It can be difficult to understand why the person you are caring for is walking about. By exploring the reasons, you can support them with their needs and help them to remain independent and safe.

The reasons why a person with dementia might want to walk about may not be obvious. If you ask the person, they may not remember the reason or they may not be able to tell you.

As the person's carer, friend or relative, you are likely to know them best. Trust your instincts and try to use your knowledge of the person to understand why they are walking. This may help you find ways to support them.

If you are worried or have any questions about wandering contact the Alzheimer's Society:

Call their dementia support line: 0333 150 3456

Website: www.alzheimers.org.uk (search 'wandering').

The Herbert Protocol for if a person goes missing

If you care for someone with dementia, you can fill out a Herbert Protocol form which includes details about the person, their past, their habits and places they go.

Keep the form in a safe place, then if the person goes missing you can call 999, tell the police operator that they have a Herbert Protocol and give the completed form to the police. This saves time at the start of a search.

Find out more and access the form by visiting:

www.northumbria.police.uk (search 'vulnerable people at risk of going missing').

Local dementia support service, Age UK Sunderland's Essence Service can supply you with a form to complete yourself or can offer support to complete it if necessary.

Call: 0191 522 1310

Safe and Found online

You can now fill in a Herbert Protocol form online. This gives police quicker access to the information.

Getting out and about

The importance of appropriate footwear

People experiencing dementia often face several footwear-related challenges due to their cognitive and physical limitations.

These challenges may include:

1. Difficulty with laces
2. Increased risk of falls
3. Sensory changes.

The importance of comfort, safety, and ease of use cannot be overstated for shoes for dementia patients. Here are some things to consider:

Comfort – Dementia patients spend significant time on their feet, so choosing shoes that provide cushioning, adequate arch support, and a comfortable fit is crucial. This can help minimize discomfort and foot pain.

Safety – Shoes with non-slip soles and good traction are essential to reduce the risk of slips, trips, and falls. Look for footwear with slip-resistant features that provide stability and grip on various surfaces.

Ease of use – Opt for shoes with easy closure systems, such as velcro straps or hook-and-loop closures. These alternatives to traditional laces make it easier for dementia patients to put on and remove their shoes independently.

Proper fit – Shoes should fit well to prevent blisters, pressure sores, or rubbing against the feet. Ensure the shoes are neither too tight nor too loose, as either can cause discomfort and foot problems.

By prioritizing comfort, safety, and ease of use in shoes for dementia patients, you can enhance mobility, reduce the risk of falls, and promote overall well-being.

Information about Sunderland's Falls Service can be found in the Physical Health section of this booklet.

Buy easy dress clothing and shoes

The Alzheimer's Society work with suppliers to offer a wide range of easy dress clothing and footwear for men and women, including shirts, blouses, trousers, skirts, underwear and nightwear and trainers.

Call: 0333 366 0035

When you are raising your grandchildren

Some people who are bringing up their grandchildren can be experiencing memory difficulties or get a diagnosis of dementia. Here is some of the support available.

More than Grandparents

Raising someone else's child is a huge responsibility particularly if the child you are caring for has emotional difficulties as a result of early years trauma. For a grandparent parenting a second time around it can be exhausting and isolating and at times extremely stressful and a daunting experience.

More than Grandparents hold regular peer support meetings where you can have a cuppa and a chat to people who have had similar experiences. They arrange regular social events and opportunities for respite and relaxation to reduce feelings of isolation and to encourage positivity and mental and physical well-being.

Eating and drinking

Eating

Many people living with dementia experience difficulties with their sight and their perception. This may cause them to misinterpret their surroundings.

Switching from a white plate to a plain coloured plate, such as blue or red can help people with dementia improve their eating, and as a result, their nutritional intake.

The Eatwell Guide

The Eatwell Guide shows how much of what we eat overall should come from each food group to achieve a healthy, balanced diet.

You do not need to achieve this balance with every meal but try to get the balance right over a day or even a week.

Essence Service lunch club

Eating and drinking

Drinking

People with dementia may not always recognise when they are thirsty or be able to express their thirst. This may mean that they do not drink enough. They may become dehydrated. This may increase the risk of Urinary Tract Infections (UTIs, commonly known as water infections).

Hits and tips for good hydration

- Allow the person time to drink without rushing.
- Sit and have a drink with them.
- Ensure the person is sitting upright and comfortably.
- If carers are coming in, ask them to offer drinks at the start and end of visits.
- Offer a drink whenever anyone visits – drinking is a sociable activity.
- Attending a memory café, day centre or lunch club may encourage the person to drink. They may imitate what other people are doing, and be more willing to take direction from a staff member or volunteer.
- Consider if there are any underlying problems, such as pain, depression or an infection – if in doubt, contact their GP.
- If the person has difficulty swallowing, ask their GP for a referral to a dietician.

What to offer

Try a range of different drinks. This could be water, tea, coffee, hot chocolate, milk, fruit juice and squash. Try drinks at different temperatures to see if they would prefer a cold or warm drink. Try offering stronger or sweeter flavours, like a less diluted squash.

Fluid intake can come from food, too, such as jelly, ice cream, ice lollies, sorbet, soup, yoghurt, custard, watermelon, pineapple, cucumber, pears, and even jacket potatoes.

Offer the person their favourite mug, glass or beaker. Different sizes and shapes of cup may help, to see if they have a preference. You may want to try a clear glass so they can see what's inside, or colourful cups to attract their attention.

Always try to offer help if the person is struggling to pick up or drink from a cup. Always ensure they always have a drink within reach. Check that their cup or glass isn't too heavy or a difficult shape to grasp and describe the drink you are offering.

Keep the cup topped up so they can see it's full and it's easy to drink from. If you're measuring fluid intake, pour drinks from a jug so you can monitor how much the person has drunk.

Boost hydration with Jelly Drops

Jelly drops are sugar free water sweets made of 95% water. Designed to support health and hydration for people living with dementia and others that may struggle with hydration. Available in 6 juicy flavours.

Alcohol – What to do if a person with dementia drinks too much alcohol

Dementia UK say, while drinking in moderation can be an enjoyable part of life, it may have a negative impact on a person with dementia. For example, by increasing confusion, disorientation and the risk of falls.

Dementia may cause some people to drink too much alcohol. This could be because:

- They have a form of dementia that affects their impulse control, like frontotemporal dementia.
- They forget how much alcohol they have drunk.
- They forget when they last drank alcohol.
- They have changes in taste that make alcohol more appealing.

If the person with dementia seems to be consuming alcohol excessively, you may want to avoid having alcohol in the home and provide low or zero alcohol alternatives instead.

A healthcare professional can advise you on whether the person should reduce their alcohol intake. They can also help devise a plan for cutting back or stopping drinking.

Bear in mind that alcohol may interfere with some forms of medication that the person with dementia may be taking. This may stop the medication working well and increase the risk of side effects. A GP or pharmacist can advise you about whether it is safe to drink alcohol when taking a medication.

Wear Recovery

Based in Sunderland, Wear Recovery can offer support if a person wants to make positive changes to their alcohol use. Working across Sunderland offering one-to-one, group, and peer support. They will support people with any questions or concerns you might have about alcohol, your mental health, and more.

Age UK Sunderland

Age UK Sunderland have two day care options:

- The Redwood Centre, based in Sunderland city centre. This service is available to anyone who requires support to maintain independence.
- The Metcalf Centre, situated in Houghton-le-Spring. This is a bespoke service for individuals with moderate dementia.

Both offer day care from Monday – Friday 10.00am – 3.00pm and are available for those over the age of 50 years old, who live within the City of Sunderland. Places are accessed following an initial assessment and are subject to service capacity. These services are chargeable, but you may be able to get support with the cost.

Should you wish to access either day care service, please contact Age UK Sunderland. Their Day Services Coordinator will be delighted to answer your questions either by telephone, email or a home visit. Referrals are also accepted from Health, Housing and Adult Services.

The Essence Service

The Essence Service recognises the vital role of carers and the impact caring for someone with dementia can have. They support carers throughout the dementia journey and when their loved ones' dementia progresses. Their staff continue to provide carers with bespoke person-centered support, social prescribing and peer support groups (please see below).

Peer support groups are an opportunity for carers to join other carers and talk about their experiences in a relaxed, confidential environment. This can reduce feelings of guilt, loneliness and isolation and can enable them to access information and support during and, after your caring role ceases.

About Us

At Sunderland Carers Centre we provide support to children, young people and adults who look after others and are by our definition, 'a Carer'. Many people do not see themselves as carers. They are parents, grandparents, husbands, wives, children, partners, relatives or friends, just doing what needs to be done for the person they care for.

However, if you support a family member or friend to maintain their health, wellbeing and quality of life, then you are a carer.

We offer a Dementia Advice Service that can provide information, advice and guidance to any family member or friend of someone with dementia, awaiting a dementia diagnosis or worried about someone's memory. We will provide support throughout a person's dementia journey. The Carers Centre is a dementia friendly building and staff have a range of specialist knowledge.

Support can include:

- General Dementia condition information and how to obtain a diagnosis.
- A guide to caring for someone with Dementia.
- Carrying out Carers Assessments on behalf of Sunderland City Council. A Carers Assessment will look at how caring affects your life and consider how your own well-being can be supported now and in the future.
- One to one support and a listening ear.
- General information, advice and guidance.
- Signpost to other agencies who might be able to help you.
- Representation and support at meetings with other services.
- Peer support (groups) and social activities.
- On-going support with no time limit that is individual to you and your family.
- Targeted Young Carers support which can include; 1-1 listening support, peer support, advocacy and family support and help with education, employment, training and transition.

End of life

Making arrangements for end of life

You can never fully prepare for your own death. No one knows the emotions, feelings, and thoughts that will come up at the time of our death until we're in that position ourselves.

But there are things we can do to help ourselves, and our loved ones, when we're in that position. This will make sure last wishes are met and the process runs smoothly.

Considering where to live at the end of your life

You may have strong ideas about where you'd like to live and be cared for at the end of your life, and where you would choose to die. This often involves balancing the pros and cons of different options, so it can be helpful to think about these in advance and make sure you speak to someone you trust about your wishes.

Planning for end of life if you live in a care home

Some care homes contact a local funeral director after a resident passes away. It is important that you share your wishes for end of life with your care home, if you have a preference as to which funeral director is used.

Make sure you share this information with the home when you first become a resident in the home or make sure you tell a person close to you, so they can share this information with the home on your behalf.

Marie Curie

Marie Curie is the UK's leading end of life charity. They care when there is no cure. They'll ease your pain, protect your dignity and support the people you love – putting you first.

End of life

Do Not Attempt Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (DNACPR)

DNACPR means if your heart or breathing stops your healthcare team will not try to restart it.

A DNACPR decision is made by you and/or your doctor or healthcare team while you have capacity to make this decision.

A DNACPR decision is usually recorded on a special form, which is easily recognised by doctors, nurses and healthcare workers, so they know what to do in an emergency.

This form is kept in your medical records. It may also be printed and kept with you if you are at home or in a care home.

You and the people important to you should know that a DNACPR form has been put in your medical records.

The form says that if your heart or breathing stops, CPR should not be tried. This means medical staff will not try to restart your heart or breathing.

More information, speak to one of your Healthcare professionals or visit: www.nhs.uk (search 'DNACPR').

Who will look after my pets?

The wellbeing of your pets after you die is an important aspect of planning for end of life.

The person will need to decide who will be the best and most appropriate person to care for their beloved pet after their death. It is important that they speak to the person about their decision to ensure they are both able and willing to care for a pet.

The person may be able to provide some kind of financial provision for their pet's future care. This also should be discussed and agreed with the person they choose to look after their pet when they are no longer able to do so.

Cinnamon Trust

Thank you to our partners

This work would not have been possible without the support from our partners and local carers with lived experience of living and supporting a loved one with a dementia diagnosis. Thank you on behalf of all at Healthwatch Sunderland for your time, your passion and your commitment to producing this booklet. It is hoped it will support and improve the lives of people experiencing memory difficulties, dementia and their carers across the City of Sunderland.

Thank you to:
